Fascination 2.0 – Communicating Effectively

Fascinate Certified Advisor Mary Albright is back to take us on the next step in the Fascination journey. We've learned about our Fascination Advantages, but how do you use them to communicate effectively?

In this workshop, you'll see the benefits of being a confidence builder with Fascination by going through an introductory Anthem Building exercise. Through our session, you'll get actionable tips on articulating value, so you can be more present for your peers and teams and be more confident in your communication. When you articulate value, you can be more present.

When you aren't distracted by what others think, you can communicate more clearly because you know you have something valuable to say.
When you handle conflict better, you don't feel the need to defend your value which allows you to focus on facts.

If you've previously purchased a Fascination report, please review your report before attending this session. It will be helpful to have your report or access to it during the session.

If you are new to Fascination, you can get a complimentary basic result at <http://www.maryalbright.com/profile>
